Dear Employer,

At CalPERS, we understand the importance of maintaining a healthy lifestyle. With over 55 years of experience in the health care industry, we provide quality healthcare to nearly 1,200 public agencies and schools, as well as the State of California, and cover over 1.4 million employees and their families. As the largest purchaser of health benefits in California, we bring innovative designs in our plans to help improve the health outcomes of your employees.

We believe that a proactive approach to health wellness can greatly reduce disease and reduce overall costs associated with rising health care premiums. We strive to bring the latest resources needed to help you and your employees reach and maintain a healthy way of living. That is why we offer Basic health plan members free preventive care office visits including screening tests, well-baby visits, and immunizations.

We also believe, like you, that our employees are our most valuable resource. To this end, we encourage you to join us in implementing effective, meaningful wellness strategies at the workplace. These strategies have been proven to increase employee morale, reduce absenteeism, and improve health outcomes. Additionally, the workplace provides an excellent opportunity to educate and support employees’ efforts to make healthy choices and positive lifestyle changes.

One strategy is to invest in evidence-based, well designed, and comprehensive workplace wellness programs. Using the basic cornerstones of wellness—nutrition, physical activity, and emotional well-being—will help you to start developing a successful wellness program. Your unique operational culture and employee needs will also help determine the approach, goals, and focus of your health promotional programs.

Wellness strategies improve the health and well-being of your employees, and positively impact your bottom line.

As your partner, we have put together this booklet to help you find tools, resources, and programs our health plans offer that you can use to advocate for your employees’ good health. You will also find examples of CalPERS’ own experience to keep employees healthy through wellness programs.

We look forward to helping you educate and support your employees so they make choices that lead to healthier and more balanced lives.

What Is Wellness?

The Random House Unabridged Dictionary defines wellness as:

- The quality or state of being healthy in body and mind, especially as the result of deliberate effort.
- An approach to health care that emphasizes preventing illness and prolonging life, as opposed to emphasizing treatment of diseases.

Wellness involves being aware and making decisions to be well and stay well. It involves making disease prevention a priority, and setting healthy lifestyle goals. These goals may focus on diet and nutrition, being physically active, maintaining emotional well-being, or all of the above.

An effective wellness program advocates for an individual’s health and supports them in becoming aware of and participating in choices to create a healthy lifestyle. CalPERS invites employers to take an active role in managing employee health. We invite you to partner with us and our health plans to promote wellness and improve health outcomes at your workplace.

Why Advocate for Your Employees’ Health?

Advocating for the health of your employees is a wise decision. In addition to increasing employee morale, reducing absenteeism, and improving health outcomes, it also benefits your organization by keeping productivity up and costs down.

Business leaders are realizing that the health status of their workforce is related to their bottom line. For example, a study published in 2013 is the first to track the stock market performance of publicly traded companies that had documented strong health, safety, and environmental programs. The research found that companies previously recognized for their outstanding approaches to health and safety by the American College of Occupational Medicine’s Corporate Health Achievement Award significantly outperformed the Standard & Poor’s 500 between 1997 and 2012, with excess annual returns ranging from 3.03 to 5.27 percent.

Although correlation is not the same as causation, the results of studies consistently suggest that companies focusing on the health and safety of their workforce can yield greater value for their investors, including competitive advantage in the market.

We recognize that individuals are ultimately responsible for their own health. The workplace provides an excellent opportunity to educate and support employees’ efforts toward healthy choices and positive lifestyle changes:

- It is easy to reach employees with targeted communications.
- Coworkers in social networks can provide vital support for learning, adopting healthier lifestyles, and maintaining motivation.
- More informed and educated coworkers can share wellness information that reinforces positive behavior.
The Cornerstones of Wellness

Encouraging employees to engage in healthy behaviors and to take advantage of health management and wellness programs offered through their health plans will improve their quality of life. A meaningful workplace wellness program supports employees’ efforts toward making wise choices that maximize health and minimize illness and disease.

When you consider a wellness program at your workplace, you might want to think about these three cornerstones of wellness:

- Nutrition
- Physical activity
- Emotional well-being

Nutrition
Proper nutrition is essential for good health — both now and in the future. Eating a nutritious diet is also important for reducing the risk of many chronic diseases, such as heart disease, stroke, diabetes, osteoporosis, and certain types of cancers.

Fast Facts:
- Poor nutrition and inactivity are major causes of obesity.
- More than one-third or 78.6 million U.S. adults are obese.
- On average, medical costs increase by $1,429 per person for those who are obese.

Sources: Ogden et al., JAMA 2014; Finkelstein et al., Health Affairs 2009

Physical Activity
The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) state that regular physical activity can help control weight; reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease, type 2 diabetes, metabolic syndrome, and some cancers; strengthen bones and muscles; improve mental health and mood; increase a person’s chances of living longer; and, for older adults, improve the ability to perform daily activities and prevent falls.

Fast Facts:
- About one in five adults or 21 percent meet the 2008 Physical Activity Guidelines
- Physical activity can improve health, lengthen life, help maintain a healthy weight, improve academic performance, and lower risk for heart disease, stroke, type 2 diabetes, depression, and some cancers.

Source: Facts About Physical Activity. 2014 https://www.cdc.gov/physicalactivity/data/facts.htm

Emotional Well-Being
Learning to deal with stress is critical to one’s emotional well-being. The American Psychological Association offers some healthy behaviors for dealing with stress and building emotional resilience. These include connecting with others for support, setting realistic goals for tasks, keeping things in perspective, and addressing the underlying cause of the stress.

Fast Facts:
- One in five American adults has experienced a mental health issue.
- One in 10 young people has experienced a period of major depression and one in 25 Americans lives with a serious mental illness, such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, or major depression.

Ideas for Getting Started

There are many resources available on the internet that can provide you with information on developing a workplace wellness program. It may not even cost anything to get started. All you need is some motivation, determination, and a little innovation.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has steps in designing a workplace wellness program, including some basic steps to plan and create a “culture of health”:

- Assess an appetite for wellness
- Develop a multilayer strategic plan
- Develop a communication campaign
- Establish measurement methods
- Provide education programs
- Initiate interventions
- Engage and integrate
- Conduct financial analysis

To begin, it might be helpful to organize activities around national health observances, such as National Nutrition Month, Employee Health and Fitness Month, etc. For a monthly listing of national observances, visit the WELCOA website at www.welcoa.org/observances/.
Next Steps

Employers can use the basic cornerstones of wellness — nutrition, physical activity, and emotional well-being — to develop a meaningful and successful wellness program at their workplaces. Here are a few examples:

Nutrition

Help your employees make healthy lifestyle choices by providing information about proper diet and nutrition, and creating an environment of support and motivation at the workplace. Things you can do to get started:

- Provide a bulletin board for employees to post and exchange healthy recipes and weight loss success stories.
- Keep water coolers available and clean.
- Host monthly nutrition-related workshops with topics like healthy cooking, nutrition for disease prevention, and diabetes awareness.
- Publish articles to support healthy eating in employee newsletters or post on internal wellness websites.
- Offer a weight loss program.

Physical Activity and Health

Encourage employees to incorporate daily physical activity into their work day, such as walking, stair climbing, jogging, and exercise classes. Some ideas for getting started are:

- Implement a walking program.
- Advocate participation in community walks/runs.
- Support informal walking groups/buddies by developing a walking map that lists various walking routes and distances.
- Encourage walking meetings if appropriate.
- Ensure that bike racks or storage units are available for employees who bike to work.

Emotional Well-Being

Life has its ups and downs, and learning how to manage stress has an impact on health — both physically and emotionally. You can support your employees’ emotional health by providing training and establishing a supportive environment. Here are some things you can do to get started:

- Hold lunch-hour brown bag workshops on topics such as stress management, balancing work and family, or relaxation techniques.
- Publish mental health-related articles in employee newsletters or internal wellness websites.
- Designate a quiet room for relaxation/meditation.
- Provide employee training on stress management.
- Develop your leadership team’s ability to communicate, clarify workload priorities, and address resource and staff training needs.
- Encourage workstation stretching techniques.
- Remember the power of staff appreciation.

Remember, one size does not fit all. Your unique organizational culture and your employees’ needs and interests will determine the approach, goals, and focus of your health promotion programs.

Employers can take advantage of existing workplace wellness program guidelines established by other agencies. The California Department of Public Health (CDPH) offers materials to help employers begin a program with a workplace environmental health assessment. CDPH also offers a free workplace wellness program for employers called Take Action! Both may be found at: www.cdph.ca.gov/programs/cpns/Pages/WorksiteProgram.aspx.
Examples of Workplace Wellness

CalPERS has promoted healthy lifestyles for its employees for more than 30 years. Our Wellness Program focuses on providing employees with resources, information, and activities that encourage them to adopt and maintain healthy behaviors and lifestyles. It also supports our goal of attracting, developing, and retaining a competent, creative, and motivated workforce. The CalPERS Wellness Program offerings include:

- Fitness and group exercise classes.
- Courses and workshops on nutrition, weight loss, stress management, smoking cessation, and personal safety and awareness.
- Employee fitness walking groups with maps of local walking routes.
- Onsite biannual health screenings and encouragement of employees to complete a health risk assessment to evaluate their overall health.
- A Wellness Committee of employee volunteers who help create and promote programs that encourage and motivate CalPERS staff to live healthy and balanced lives.
- Additional resources, such as annual flu clinics, health newsletters, and support for community outreach activities that promote physical fitness or health-related causes.

CalPERS is part of a group that includes the American Institutes for Research (AIR), the California Health Care Coalition, and six major health care purchasers. The group’s objectives are to help employees get more actively involved in their health care, including learning about health care quality basics; recognizing and choosing good quality health care; and managing their overall health.

The group implemented a communications toolkit developed by AIR that is aimed at helping employers and other organizations communicate with employees about evidence-based health care. The communications toolkit can be found at www.cdph.ca.gov/programs/cpns/Pages/WorksiteProgram.aspx.
