

Washington D.C. Insight- Policy and Politics

Summary of Discussion

2024 kicks off with Congress having several major domestic and international policy issues on its plate while also trying to keep the government open and provide oversight on federal regulators who are trying to finalize some significant rules impacting the capital markets. Combine this with election year politics that could see a rematch of President Biden and former President Trump and end with the House and Senate flipping majorities, and 2024 could be a very interesting and busy year. In this session Tyler Gellasch and Jeannine Markoe Raymond will offer their insights on the 2024 political landscape and its impact on the legislative and regulatory policies coming out of Washington, D.C.
