Protecting Americans' Retirement Savings From Politics Act. Among other things, requires proxy advisory firms to register with the SEC and to certify that they will provide proxy voting advice only in best economic interests of shareholders. It requires institutional investment managers who engage proxy advisory firms to file annual reports with the SEC outlining how they voted on every shareholder proposal and the percentage of votes cast on shareholder proposals that were consistent with proxy advisory firm recommendations. It also imposes additional requirements on larger institutional investment managers to include an economic analysis for every shareholder proposal vote that is not consistent with the recommendation of the public companies' board. In addition, it prohibits institutional investors from "robo-voting" without performing an independent review and analysis and requires investment managers of passively managed funds to either follow the specific instructions of individual investors, vote in alignment with the company's board, or abstain from the vote entirely. The bill also requires the SEC to conduct a study on the impacts that the European Union's Corporate Sustainability Due Diligence Directive and Corporate Sustainability Reporting Directive may have on U.S. companies, consumers, and investors.
